FLORISTS

Florists are professionals who design and create floral arrangements for various occasions, including weddings, funerals, and social events. They work with a variety of flowers and foliage to create beautiful and lasting displays.

Florists typically work in a shop or greenhouse, where they receive orders from customers and prepare the arrangements. They may also deliver the arrangements to the customer's home or business.

Florists must have a strong understanding of the different types of flowers and foliage, as well as the techniques for arranging them. They must also be able to work with a variety of budgets and create arrangements that are both beautiful and practical.

Florists are often required to work long hours, especially during the wedding season. They must also be able to handle the physical demands of the job, such as lifting heavy boxes and standing for long periods.

Florists are a vital part of the wedding industry, and their work is essential to creating a beautiful and memorable day for couples. They are also responsible for creating beautiful and lasting displays for funerals and other special occasions.

Florists are a creative and hardworking profession, and they play a vital role in the wedding industry. They are responsible for creating beautiful and lasting displays that are both beautiful and practical.
